- Artel Rubber Holdings complete development of new 18,000 sq ft facility in Alcester
- Premises will enable firm to increase production capacity to meet growing demand

Who? Local silicone components manufacturer, Artel Rubber Holdings Limited has completed the construction of a brand new production facility in Alcester. Owned by directors Simon Lavin and Jacques Commeny, Artel Rubber Holdings is one of the UK's leading silicone components manufacturers, supplying businesses in the automotive, rail, defence, marine, F1, food and pharmaceutical industries for over 24 years.

How did we help? The new 18,000 sq ft premises, which have been funded with support from Royal Bank of Scotland, will enable the growing business to increase its production capacity to meet rising demand. Located on Springfield Business Park in Alcester, the building is twice the size of the company's previous home in Bidford on Avon. Simon Lavin, Executive Director of Artel Rubber Holdings, said: "In recent years we have achieved significant growth which meant that we had begun to outgrow our existing premises. The new site is ideal and will meet our needs for the foreseeable future."

Our team. Adam Smith, Senior Relationship Manager at Royal Bank of Scotland, said: "The new premises are fantastic and I am pleased that we have been able to support Artel Rubber Holdings to make this investment into their future. Building their own purpose built facility was definitely the right move for the company to take and the property will allow them to continue to drive growth and increase production."

"Securing funding for self-build projects is notoriously difficult but the support we received from Royal Bank of Scotland has been excellent. Adam Smith and his team worked closely with us throughout the build to ensure that funding was available when we needed it."
